

Abstract

The physical fit, comfort, and appearance of a hearing instrument that resides in the ear can be improved by providing the shell of the instrument with a textured finish. A variety of textured finishes can be 5 imparted during the fabrication process or applied after fabrication.